Argon team's plan for testnet advertisement and promotion

What is mentioned below just shows the plan and how we will work.

Next week, between April 27 and May 9, we will activate the application on the testnet at a time when the crypto money market gives the opportunity.

After we informed you about testnet, we made many changes to the application:

Argon's application interface has been completely changed and a new UI/UX design has been made.

A real-time messaging platform that works only with your wallet address information has been created to facilitate communication between Freelancer - Approver - Customer.

Argon's web site interface has started to be completely changed. And for this, 2 new designers have joined our team.

If approvers didn't approve jobs, keeping the fee posted on the contract would hurt the entire platform, so we've developed the following to address the following issues:

If the approver account does not approve the job defined within 5 days, the submitted job will be re-defined to an account from the Argon team, so your money will not remain in the contract. Although this damages decentralization, it is necessary for the platform to be usable.
